

Locomote, Another Aus Tech Buy For Travelport

🕒 5 AUGUST, 2014 👤 MARTIN KELLY

Travelport has bought 49% of travel management platform Locomote. The investment comes hard on the heels of the global travel technology giant increasing its stake in eNett.

“We are excited about the reaction received from the initial companies that have experienced the Locomote product line, including ease of deployment and user adoption,” said Travelport CEO Gordon Wilson.

“We believe that further assets Travelport has recently acquired, such as the corporate travel booking company, Hotelzon, will add more differentiated product to Locomote in the near future.”

Both Locomote and eNett are based in Melbourne, Australia.
